

A California native, Olympic bronze medalist Kim Vandenberg specializes in both the butterfly and freestyle. She is a two-time gold medalist from the 2011 Pan American games in the 200 butterfly and the 4x200 freestyle relay, a silver medalist from the 2007 world championships in the 200 fly and a three-time national champion in the 200 butterfly.

Since competing in the 2008 Beijing Olympics, she has traveled the world giving motivational talks and teaching swim clinics and private lessons to international schools throughout the United States, Asia, Australia, Europe and South America. She continues to swim for the New York Athletic Club and is based in Brooklyn, New York.

Vandenberg continues to promote women in sports as a contributing writer for the Women's Sports Foundation and serves as a mentor for Rise Athletes. Vandenberg is a passionate philanthropist working as an Ambassador for Room to Read, a leading non-profit focusing on girls' education and children's literacy and for Up2Us Sports, a national non-profit organization dedicated to supporting underserved youth by providing them with coaches trained in positive youth development as well as an Ambassador for Kids Play International, a non-profit organization using sport as a catalyst to promote gender equity in communities impacted by genocide.